RUSSIAN RESISTANCE STUBBORN

They Seek Desperately to Stem Rush of Trenton Allies Toward Lemberg;
Fierce Fighting Continues in West
With no Decision for Either Side.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, June 5.—Another German air raid on the coast of Britain last night, coupled with the usual weekend activity of German submarines, are the war developments of the past 12 hours which are today holding public attention. Disclosure of the fall of Przemysl has been held aside for matters nearer home, little is known as yet of the extent of the aerial attack, but it does not seem to have done much damage or been costly in lives.

German submarines have been very busy during the last few days in the North Sea and in the Bristol channel. Ten vessels have been attacked in the last three days without loss of life, except in the case of the trawler Victor, four members of the crew of this boat and a boy passenger having fallen victims to shells fired by the attacking submarine.The biggest capture of the Germans was the 3,000-ton Liverpool steamer Utkan. Another important victim was the Catrin liner, erroneously reported as the Winton, liner steamer of the same name. The other ships sent to the bottom by the Germans include four British, four neutral, two American, four neutral ships, two British, one Norwegian and one Swedish.The Austro-German forces have pushed their salient to Pukla, which is some distance north of Przemysl. Notwithstanding the evacuation of this fortress the Russians have maintained an unbroken fighting front on both sides of the Wielka river, which separates the Austrians and Germans.

GERMANS ADMIT LOSS OF SUGAR REFINERY.

BERLIN, via London, June 5.—German headquarters today gave out the following report:

"In the western theatre of the war the Germans, further fighting for possession of the remainder of the sugar refinery at Soissons. For the time being it is in again in possession of the French. The enemy's attack at Neuville has been repulsed. The airship station at Lommeartment, near Namur, was destroyed yesterday.

The eastern theatre of the war, however, has not been quiet. Attacks continued yesterday at Barneveld and Sawydki, our troops have made further advances and have driven off their opponents, who hold the bridge-head at Sawydki. They made 1,379 prisoners. Further north cavalry engagements took place yesterday in the region of Pekeljand, with good results for us.

In the south-western theatre of war to the east of Jaroslaw the situation remains unchanged. South of Przemysl our troops under General Maciwka together with Austro-Hungarian troops are advancing in the direction of Mozdka. The army under General Koenig is back in the direction of Kalisz and Zurawka, on the Oder.

IN LONDON, CONFESSIONS

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Official announcement was made here this afternoon that another German spy, Robert Rosenthal, had been arrested and had made a confession. According to the statement Rosenthal confessed he had been sent to the German admiral to obtain information on naval matters.

GERMAN ARMY STUCK ON NEW GERMAN NOTE.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—President Wilson returned to the White House toward noon after a brief outing and gave his attention to putting the note to Germany into final form. While its main principles were approved at the cabinet session yesterday the President today had not completed his executive plan.

It was not known exactly what the note would be, but the general impression in executive quarters was that it was phrased in an affirmative or negative answer to the query of the United States as to Germany's intention to exercise the rights of visit and search when encountering unarmed merchant ships in the neutral seas.

So far, it would only say that when the note actually goes forward to Berlin the fact would be made public. When the note itself would be published, he said, he did not know.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Members of the Woman's Culture Club and their friends, numbering in all about 110, heard Mrs. Edith Harris Scott of Pittsburgh, give a reading on "War Brides" at the annual reception of the Woman's Culture Club held yesterday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Rockwell Marlett in East Main street, owing to the fact that the club had closed a number of its "social" branches for more appropriate subjects. "War Brides" could not have been selected for the closing meeting. Mrs. Scott is a dramatic reader of rare ability and "War Brides" gave her many opportunities to display her wonderful emotional power. Those who heard Mrs. Scott were very fortunate as a dramatic reader of greater power never appeared in Connellsville. She is a woman of very charming personality, and held the undivided attention of the girls from the beginning to the close of her reading.

"War Brides" is the most successful modern drama of the day. The play is laid in a peasant living room of a war-ridden country; the story abounds in pathos and centers around a grief-stricken mother, whose sons have gone to war; her daughter and daughter-in-law, with remaining relatives, take care singlehanded. Following the outbreak of the war the Emperor in order to preserve the welfare of the empire orders all unmarried men to marry before going to war. The story is intensely interesting and was made very realistic by the manner in which Mrs. Scott portrayed the different characters.

Mrs. Mary Williams of Dunbar tendered two performances in a very admirable manner, and Miss Helen Bell Bush of Dawson sang two delightful songs. Her accompanist was Miss Margaret Bush.

Mrs. W. O. Schaeffer, president, Mrs. E. W. Wright, Mrs. W. L. Wright, Mrs. J. M. Young, Mrs. J. N. Burhans and Mrs. Harriet Clark, other officers of the club, Mrs. Rockwell Marlett and daughters, Mrs. William Dull, Mrs. J. Melvin Gray and Mrs. A. D. Sison received. The decorations were unusually effective. French roses and vases of American beauty roses, and carnations were tastefully and artistically placed in all the rooms. The Woman's Culture Club was organized in 1902, and the reception yesterday was one of the most delightful social functions in the club's history. Following the program delicious refreshments were served. The social committee composed of Mrs. A. P. Freed, Mrs. J. M. Clegg, Mrs. H. S. McLean, Mrs. J. L. Evans, Mrs. Walter Hinde, Mrs. John Wild and Mrs. H. H. Hinde was in charge.

Mrs. W. O. Schaeffer appointed the following committees for next year:

It is the last meeting of the conference year, and all members are requested to turn in their dues and pledges at the meeting.

The marriage of Miss Mary Gillespie of Cadiz, O., and Francis W. Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wright of Cleveland, O., was solemnized this morning at the home of the bride, with only members of the two families in attendance. The bridegroom is a young man for the Wright-Metzger Company. Mr. and Mrs. Wright will remain at their home, 1000 W. 10th street, to make their future home. F. W. Wright, an uncle of the bridegroom, was an out-of-town guest at the wedding.

Program, Mrs. W. R. Choper, Mrs. E. W. Wright and Mrs. W. R. Kenney; Civic, Mrs. W. N. Leslie, Mrs. H. G.

The Solson

BARBARA TANNIN IN "M'LISS." The charming actress, Barbara Tannin, will appear at the Solson Theatre today in the five reel motion picture, "M'Liss." The star has been famous for years, and the star is one of the best in moving pictures. "From Italy's Shores" is a two reel, sombre drama that will please all of our Italian patrons, and the rest of that matter. The tragic drama, "A Stranger in Camp" is a thrilling play. The La-Lo comedy, "Love and Some Nonsense" is a romancer for fun. Don't miss the other episode of the series, "The Black Box."

Monday Will Be Bread Day For Belgium in This City

A PENNY per day from every American would provide for all the destitute in Europe.

Think of it: One cent per head from the inhabitants of the United States means a million dollars daily!

So, after all, it ought to be a very simple matter to feed starving Belgium.

IF all of us did our share--

BUT that would mean calling upon the babe in arms and the cripple on crutches--the slum dweller and the backwoodsman--farmers and villagers and city folk--it would call for an organization, not only to carry the news of Belgium's plight, but to collect the funds and do any number of other perfectly impossible things:

While all of America must, in theory, provide for Belgium's starving, a few Americans will, in actuality, have to do the work.

The burden of relief falls upon the big cities where concentrated action is possible and where the daily press can bring the condition of these unfortunate refugees constantly to the notice of the community, until everyone comprehends the dire straits and the pressing need of Belgium's homeless waifs. In such instances as this, you, the average man are all too likely to assume that your co-operation is not vitally required, that there will be enough assistance rendered without your aid, and contrasting your means with the income of a multitude of richer men, will, in genuine sincerity, figure that a general call for aid is not specifically directed at you.

But you probably have not stopped to think that the wealthy have donated millions and the food which it bought is gone, while the famine and privation continue and steadily grow more severe. Philanthropy has assumed such magnificent proportions in recent years, and foundations and endowments have distributed such colossal sums that we're used to the idea of "Letting the Georges do it."

Whenever occasion arises for public relief and subscription lists are opened, one group of kind and public-spirited men and women invariably provides the necessary funds.

The Pittsburgh & Western Pennsylvania Committee of The Commission for Relief in Belgium

Taken all in all, it is not an exaggeration to assert that ninety per cent of charitable enterprises are supported by one per cent of our citizens.

But Belgium will perish as a nation, her famishing women and children will die on the hills and in the open fields, if you and the type which you represent do not immediately and earnestly appreciate that this job is too big for the "George Society"--that everybody, everywhere, must, and now, co-operate to prevent the ghastliest tragedy of famine that history knows.

Don't think of the millions of dollars that have been raised, but of the millions of Belgians who are still destitute. The one sum seems stupendous until you divide its beneficiaries, and then you'll find what a short end the individual gets.

The Relief Commission at no time has been able to allow more than seven cents per day for the feeding of man, woman and child. (Imagine how luxuriously you could feast on 50c a week) and yet this miserable pittance has been received with a gratitude that you, (whose notion of poverty has never included even the idea of a week of existence without shelter or provision) cannot possibly imagine.

Get this picture fixed in your mind and dwell upon it; whole communities, including families, which a year ago were dwelling in opulence, are without money, without homes, without clothes (except the horrible rags in which they stand) and without hope of survival, except through the prompt aid of America.

No other country can undertake the tremendous task.

The Belgian aged, the Belgian children and the Belgian women will perish by the hundreds of thousands if we do not continue to ship them bread.

You surely don't want it on your conscience that for lack of a few dollars' worth of food, (upon which one human being can, in that war-mangled kingdom, exist for a whole month) an old man or a young girl writhed in the unutterable torture of hunger and died.

And yet, it is not overstating the situation to say that your refusal to aid, may mean such a tragedy for at least one person.

There are so many selfish and thoughtless among us--so many who won't or who can't be reached, that every man convinced of Belgium's necessities must not only do all that lies within his power, but constitute himself a campaigner and appeal to his friend and acquaintance to do their best for the cause.

One sack of flour will save one life for a whole month. A sack of flour costs two dollars.

How many sacks of flour will you and your efforts put upon the ship of mercy which Western Pennsylvania will soon send speeding across the seas?

Monday will be Bread Day in this town.

BE PREPARED to contribute to the local committee on Monday. How many sacks of flour will you provide?

Forty cities and towns in Western Pennsylvania are making up their contributions. In all Western Pennsylvania, we are asking something from every home. Will this community do its share?

Plato Company. The occasion of his retirement brought the officials and workmen of every kind of the company together, and Robert P. Percy

A FINE DAY

The improvement of the weather on Friday was heralded with a general joy, since the wet and cool days that had been the portion of the feather man's dollars around this section for several days past was disheartening.
It grew really warm in the afternoon and growing things shared in the springing. Some of the birds had left for the south, that was planned and it was feared by some that the weather would continue hot, and the seed would only rot.

which a number of Scottsdale people are interested, and which is a sum-

A ROMANCE OF THE BEAR TOOTH RANGE

By HAMILIN GARLAND

Copyright, 1914, by Hamlin Garland

"It's all in the trip," said Berrie. "You have to take the weather as it comes on the trail." As the storm lessened she resumed the business of cooking the midday meal, and at 2 o'clock they were able to eat in comparative comfort, though the unmetalled snow still covered the trees, and the water dripped from the branches.

"Isn't it beautiful?" exulted Wayland, with glowing boyish face. "The landscape is like a Christmas card."

"It wouldn't be so beautiful if you had to walk through ten miles of it," she sagely responded. "Daddy will be wet to the skin, for I found he didn't take his slicker. However, the sun may be out before night. That's the way the things goes in the hills."

To the youth, though the peaks were stormy, the afternoon was joyous. Berrie was a sweet companion. Under her supervision he practiced at chopping wood and took a hand at cooking.

He had to admit that she was better able to care for herself in the wilderness than most men, even western men, and, though he had not yet witnessed a display of her skill with a rifle, he was ready to believe that she could shoot as well as her size. Nevertheless he liked her better when engaged in purely feminine duties, and he led the talk back to subjects concerning which her speech was less blunt and manlike.

He liked her when she was joking, for delicious little curves of laughter played about her lips. She became very amusing as she told of her "visits east" and of her embarrassments in the homes of city friends. "I just have to own up that about all the schooling I've got is from the magazines. Sometimes I wish I had pulled out for town when I was about fourteen; but, you see, I didn't feel like leaving mother, and she didn't feel like letting the go, and so I just got what I could at Bear Tooth." She sprang up. "There's a patch of blue sky. Let's go see if we can't get a grouse." Together they strolled along the edge of the willows. "The grouse come down to feed about this time," she said. "We'll put up a roosty soon."

Within a quarter of a mile they found their birds, and she killed four with five shots. "This is all we need," she said, "and I don't believe in killing for the sake of killing. Runners should set good examples in way of game preservation. They are deputy game wardens in most states, and good ones too."

The night rose formidably from the valley while they ate their supper, but Berrie remained tranquil. "Those hours probably went clean back to the ranch. If they did, daddy can't possibly get back before 8 o'clock, and he may not get back till tomorrow."

Norcross, with his city training, was acutely conscious of the delicacy of the situation. In his sister's circle a girl left alone in this way with a man would have been very seriously embarrassed, but it was evident that Berrie took it all joyfully, innocently. Their being together was something which had happened in the natural course of weather, a condition for which they were in no way responsible. Therefore she permitted herself to be frankly happy in the charm of their enforced intimacy.

She had never known a youth of his quality. He was so considerate, so refined, so quick of understanding, and so swift to serve. He filled her mind to the exclusion of unimportant matters like the snow, which was beginning again. Indeed, her only anxiety concerned his health, and as he toiled amid the falling flakes, intent upon heaping up wood enough to last out the night, she became solicitous.

"You will be sickened," she warned him. "Don't stay out any more. Come to the fire. I'll bring in the wood."

Something primal, some strength he did not know he possessed sustained him, and he toiled on. "Suppose this snow keeps falling?" he reported. "The supervisor will not be able to get back tonight—perhaps not for a couple of nights. We will need a lot of fuel."

He did not voice the fear of the storm which filled his thought, but the girl understood it. "It won't be very cold," she calmly replied. "It never is during these early blizzards, and, besides, all we need to do is to drop down the trail ten miles, and we'll be entirely out of it."

"I'll feel safer with plenty of wood," he argued, but soon found it necessary to rest from his labors. Coming in to camp, he seated himself beside her on a roll of blankets, and so together they tended the fire and watched the darkness roll over the lake till the shining crystals seemed to drop from a measured black arch, soundless and oppressive.

"What time is it now?" she asked abruptly.

He looked at his watch. "Half after 8."

"If father isn't on this side of the divide now he won't try to cross. If he's coming down the slope he'll be here in an hour, although that trail is a tolerably tough proposition this minute. A patch of dead timber on a dark night is sure a nuisance even to a good man. He may not make it."

"Couldn't I rig up a torch and go to meet him?"

She put her hand on his arm. "You stay right here," she commanded. "You couldn't follow that trail the minutes."

"You have a very poor opinion of my skill."

"No, I haven't; but I know how hard it is to keep direction on a night like this, and I don't want you wandering around in the timber. Father can take care of himself. He's probably sitting under a big tree smoking his pipe before his fire—or else he's at home. He knows we're all right, and we are. We have wood and grub and plenty of blankets and a roof over us. You can make your bed under this sky," she said, looking up at the canvas. "It beats the old balsam as a roof. You mustn't sleep cold again."

"I think I'd better sit up and keep the fire going," he replied hurriedly.

"There's a big log out there that I'm going to bring in to roll up on the windward side."

"It'll be cold and wet early in the morning, and I don't like to hunt killing in the snow," she said. "I always get everything ready the night before. I wish you had a better bed. It seems awful to me to have the tent wall you are cold."

CHAPTER VIII.

The Walk in the Rain.

NE by one, under her supervision, he made preparations for marching. He cut some shrubbery from a dead, dry branch of fir and put them under the tent and brought a bucket of water from the creek, and then together they dragged up the dead tree.

Had the young man been other than he was, the girl's purity, candor and self-reliance would have conduced him, and when she withdrew to the little tent and let fall the frail barrier between them she was as safe from intrusion as if she had taken refuge behind gates of triple brass. Nothing in all his life had moved him so deeply as her solicitude, her sweet trust in his honor, and he sat long in profound meditation. Any man would be elated in the ownership of her love he admitted. That he possessed her pity and her friendship he knew, and he began to wonder if he had made a deeper appeal to her than this.

"Can it be that I am really a man to her?" he thought. "I who am only a poor weakling whom the rain and snow can appall?"

Then he thought of the effect of this night upon her life. What would Clifford Belden do now? To wait deep would his rage descend if he should come to know of it?

Berrie was silent. Twice she spoke from her couch to say: "You'd better go to bed. Daddy can't get here till tomorrow."

"I'll stay up awhile yet. My boots aren't entirely dried out."

After a silence she said: "You must not get chilled. Bring your bed into the tent. There is room for you."

"Oh, no, that isn't necessary. I'm standing it very well."

"You'll be sick!" she urged, in a voice of alarm. "Please drag your bed inside the door. What would I do if you should have pneumonia tomorrow? You must not take any risk of a fever."

The thought of a sheltered spot, of something to break the remorseless wind, overcame his scruples, and he drew his bed inside the tent and rearranged it there.

"You're half frozen," she said. "Your teeth are chattering."

"I'll be all right in a few moments," he said. "Please go to sleep. I shall be snug as a bug in a moment."

She watched his shadowy motions from her bed, and when at last he had nestled into his blankets she said, "If you don't lose your chill I'll heat a neck and put it at your feet."

He was ready to cry out in shame of his weakness, but he lay silent till he could command his voice, then he said: "That would drive me from the country in disgrace. Think of what the follows down below will say when they know of my cold feet!"

"I'll feel safer with plenty of wood," he argued, but soon found it necessary to rest from his labors. Coming in to camp, he seated himself beside her on a roll of blankets, and so together

ARCHDUKE FREDERICK AND DAUGHTER ISABELLA.

"They won't hear of it, and, besides, it is better to carry a hot water bag than to be held up with a fever."

Her anxiety lessened as his voice returned its pleasant tenor again. "Dear girl," he said, "no one could have been sweeter—more like a guardian angel to me. Don't place me under any greater obligation. Go to sleep. I am better much better now."

She did not speak for a few moments, but in a voice that conveyed to him a knowledge that his words of endeavor had deeply moved her she softly said, "Oh, yes, after I came inside, of course, I was more or less restless, expecting your father to ride up."

"Toot boy! You'd suffer, didn't you? I was afraid you would. Did you sleep at all?" she asked tenderly, but, of course, I was more or less restless, expecting your father to ride up."

"That's funny. I never feel that way. I slept like a log after I knew you were comfortable. You must have been comfortable. You must have been a better bed and more blankets. It's always cold up here."

"I'm all right, except I'm very lame, but I am anxious to go on. By the way, is this ranger Settle married?"

"No; his station is one of the loneliest cabins on the forest. No woman has ever been there."

This made Wayland ponder. "Ernestine," he decided, "we'll go. After all, the man is a forest officer, and you are the supervisor's daughter."

She made no further protest, but burst herself closing the pincers and putting away the camp utensils. She seemed to recognize that his judgment was sound.

At last fully provided for, they sat contentedly side by side under the tent awning and watched the falling rain as it splashed and sputtered down the timbered slopes of the prodigious nimbilthor in which the lake lay.

Again Berrie made everything sang while her young woodsmen toiled at bringing logs for the fire.

"They say every big family has a black sheep. Well that's the way of the world. Even among Diamond Tires there's about one out of every hundred that isn't just what it ought to be."

—Mister Squeegoo

We don't judge families by their black sheep.

We judge the black sheep by their families. And the better the family the blacker the sheep. So when a Diamond Tire gets into trouble we think more strongly about it because it comes from such a good family.

But isn't it a wonderful record—about one Diamond Tire in every hundred a black sheep. Oh, not really deep-dyed black—let's say it's sort of a dark gray sheep actually.

The difficulty is that Diamond Tires can only be compared with Diamond Tires. There's no other standard of comparison.

Send for our book of letters from dealers who sold Diamond Tires in 1914.

It tells how many as 99 out of every 100 of the more than half-million Diamond Tires sold last year gave maximum service at minimum mileage cost. It is yours for the asking.
